They don't feel comfortable (Saint John of Kronstadt)

Ξένες γλώσσες / In English

Proud people feel embarrassed when they're asked to humble themselves before others. So do envious or vindictive people if they're asked to wish their enemies well. But they have to defeat their passions, rein in their feelings and do what other people want or what the Gospel demands. Otherwise, if they unrepentantly cling to their passions, they'll suffer eternal damnation.
