

The life-giving breath (Saint Nicholas Velimirovich)

Ξένες γλώσσες / In English

Friendship is more necessary for the soul than for the body. When you're sad, the thought of a friend brings a smile to your face. On your death-bed, the presence of a friend beautifies the face of death. Friendship is always the life-giving breath of the angel who accompanies us through life, who raises us when we fall and who inspires us when our strength fails.
