

17 Μαρτίου 2011

Japan radioactivity could enter food chain

Ξένες γλώσσες / In English

Radioactive materials spewed into the air by Japan's earthquake-crippled nuclear plant may contaminate food and water resources, with children and unborn babies most at risk of possibly developing cancer.

Experts said exposure to radioactive materials has the potential to cause various kinds of cancers and abnormalities to fetuses, with higher levels of radiation seen as more dangerous.

Read more...

\(περισσότερα...\)